I built a sensor for the garden.
I compared two measurements before changing the code.

The second trial was more consistent.
I learned to test one change at a time.

I shared the results with my teammates.
We kept the unsuccessful trials in our notebook.

The next team repeated our method.
Their observations helped us improve it.